Angel King’s career spans two worlds: the 90s “dot-com” startup boom and the artisan food industry, where she built Blue Jacket Dairy with her husband. The leap from tech to cheesemaking wasn’t random. It followed a moment of sharp clarity during one of the busiest seasons of her life, when someone close to her challenged her priorities.

That rebuke reshaped everything. Angel discovered that sustainable success isn’t about pushing harder; but it’s about leading with intention in the middle of a full, real life. Today, she equips leaders and business owners with practical tools for building businesses that thrive without burning out.

What Angel Teaches

Leaders are overwhelmed; not because they lack drive, but because they’re constantly reacting. Angel shares tips that help people move from firefighting to clarity, focus, and sustainable growth.

Audiences leave with:

- A simple clarity framework for full, demanding seasons
- A decision filter that reduces overwhelm
- Tools for recognizing transferable strengths
- Rhythms for sustainable growth
- Permission to trade perfection for presence

PERFECT FOR

Chambers, business associations, women in business, leadership events, and entrepreneur groups seeking a relatable, real-world voice with actionable insight.

This keynote fits seamlessly within Angel’s broader message on sustainable thriving—helping audiences lead well in the middle of real life.
